Collections

Different loan programs treat collections differently. Not all collections on your credit report need to be settled for you to get a loan. Federal Law requires that collections be removed from your credit report after 7 years. However, it is common for a collection to be sold to another collection agency who will then report it as a new collection therefore starting the 7 year clock over. Collections that keep reporting on your credit report do the most damage and should be settled and paid in full. Please read the Guide to Handling Collections for more details.
